

O. Motliakh, A. Potylchak

Using of tactical and communication activities by the polygraph-experts during the instrumental diagnostics of reliability of the verbal information

The article discusses issues concerning the using of tactical communication activities by the polygraph-experts to participants of the psycho-physiological examination to verify the verbal information regarding the event of crime. The authors define the features of tactical communications activities, as well as proposing concrete ways of their improving.

Keywords: communication activities, verbal information, common trace display, instrument diagnostics reliability of verbal information.